10:00 The NHS Operation Game, Integrated health & social care

Tracy Smith, training development and delivery manager, HFMA

After years of working as independent organisations working to meet their own objectives, one of the main challenges faced by STPs is understanding the impact decisions made by one organisation is having on the whole health and social care system.

The NHS Operating Game – Integrated Health and Social Care allows participants to understand and experience the role of different organisations in the system and how the patients and money flow between them. The NHS Operating Game is an interactive board game where services and organisations are visually represented requiring participants to work together to plan service delivery over several rounds of the Game. Each round representing a month.

This three-hour session will give you the opportunity to sample the game and to appreciate how it can help both finance and non-finance professionals to understand more about NHS finance and their role in adding value for patients. This is a powerful tool that offers a very different and effective kind of learning experience.

Katya Adler

Current BBC Europe Editor Katya Adler has worked for the BBC since 1998. She is the BBC's leading voice on Brexit and the EU; her extensive interviews with political leaders across the continent have given her unique insider knowledge on European attitudes and intentions regarding a Brexit deal.

In 2017 the BBC broadcast Katya's documentary 'After Brexit: the Battle for Europe' where she examined the challenges facing the European Union over the coming years. Summarising that 'Europe's decision-makers face an unprecedented challenge. Our thorny national debate about Brexit could turn out to be irrelevant. Sooner or later the EU as we know it may no longer be there for us to leave.'

Katya will open this year's conference by reflecting on 2019's political landscape, commentating on what the future holds for the NHS in light of Brexit. Katya has been awarded honorary doctorates from both Bristol University and the University of London in laws and literature, highlighting the importance of her contribution to UK journalism.

- 10:40 Solving the global workforce crisis

Dr Mark Britnell, Global Chairman and Senior Partner at KPMG & Ran Balicer, Chief Innovation Officer, Clalit Health Services & Founding Director, Clalit Research Institute (Invited)

By 2030, the world will be short of 18 million health workers – a fifth of the total capacity to care. Global healthcare leader and award-winning author, Mark Britnell draws on his work in 77 countries to offer solutions to this growing crisis and present unique insights into what works, and what does not.

Reframing the global workforce challenge to one of health and national wealth, his forthcoming book 'Human: Solving the global workforce crisis in healthcare' invites us to refashion this wicked problem in new, adaptive ways in order to enhance productivity and prosperity. Harnessing technology, Mark asks us to imagine new models of care and levels of workforce agility, whilst always remembering that the kind heart of a human is the essence of care.
