In these times of significant change across the NHS, the role and work of finance professionals has never been more important. Throughout the four home nations, NHS finance teams continue to excel in terms of their professionalism and in the quality of the advice, guidance and support they provide to colleagues and service users across the NHS. Whether within a Health Board or Health Authority, a Foundation Trust, a PCT, or any of the other Special Health Authorities or organisations involved in the work of the NHS, the role of the finance team is crucial to ensuring the delivery of an efficient, effective and modern health service.

Now in its third year, HFMA's Awards Programme seeks to recognise the contribution that such finance teams make across our NHS in England Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. The Awards themselves cover three fundamental aspects of the finance team role; governance, delivering cost efficient services, and the annual accounts process itself. Each award focuses on the innovation and creativity necessary to ensure that the finance team continues to deliver the high quality and level of service that our customers deserve.

HFMA is recognised as "The Voice of Healthcare Finance". The Awards Ceremony at HFMA's Annual Conference in December will be an opportunity for that voice to be heard celebrating the contribution and success of finance teams across the United Kingdom. I would therefore commend these Awards to you, and actively encourage you to nominate your organisation for such recognition.

HFMA Financial Management Award

In association with

The focus on the financial performance of NHS bodies has never been greater. An increasing number of NHS bodies are failing to achieve financial balance and the NHS as a whole reported a deficit of £250 million in 2004/05 and potentially over £500 million in 2005/06. Even with the current unprecedented levels of funding NHS bodies are struggling to manage the reform agenda within the resources available.

But the level of resource growth will not continue beyond 2007/08 and NHS bodies will still face cost pressures and the challenges of achieving standards and targets. It is crucial, therefore, that NHS bodies find ways of improving the value for money and quality of the healthcare they commission and/or deliver. To do this NHS bodies must have robust financial management arrangements in place which underpin the achievement of financial balance and at the same time ensure continuous improvements in value for money. The 2006 HFMA Financial Management Award will therefore focus on the finance role in supporting the delivering of improvements in efficiency.

It is intended that there will be two categories within the award: one for PCTs and one for NHS Trusts and NHS Foundation Trusts.

The award will be managed by the HFMA's Financial Management and Research Committee.

All entries must include the following:

A statement of up to 600 words setting out:

- + a significant change in the delivery of front-line or support services, where a member or members of the finance team have identified opportunities or innovative practices, or have led to significantly facilitated changes, that have resulted in an improvement in the efficiency of the organisation (NHS Trusts and NHS Foundation Trusts);
- + how commissioning arrangements have supported and driven changes in the way services are provided and which have resulted in improvements in efficiency (PCTs);
- + an assessment of the impact on the service and/or costs; and
- + the problems encountered and overcome in delivering the improvement in efficiency.

Efficiency for the purposes of this award is defined as either:

- + a reduction in the unit cost associated with the delivery of a service; or
- + a significant improvement in the quality of a service clearly disproportionate with any increase in cost; or
- + a combination of the above.

Entries will be judged on the following criteria:

- + The scale of efficiency gain
- + The degree of innovation shown
- + The extent to which finance staff were involved with the delivery

All entries will be critically evaluated by HFMA's Financial Management & Research Committee, and short-listed responses will be evaluated by HFMA and the Audit Commission. Short-listed finalists will be invited to present their application to a panel of the judging team. The awards will be presented at the HFMA's annual conference in December 2006. Entries received may be used to compile a compendium of good practice, which would be jointly produced by HFMA and the Audit Commission.

Submissions should consist of two complete copies of their entry.
