Introduction

The HFMA has produced an NHS corporate governance map. The map brings together the key guidance and models to support effective corporate governance within the NHS and will be regularly updated.

The accountable officer of each NHS organisation has the responsibility for maintaining a sound system of internal control and governance that supports the achievement of the organisation's policies, aims and objectives, while safeguarding quality standards and public funds. Robust governance policies and procedures must be in place, and regularly evaluated, to support this assurance.

In an ever-changing environment, with new risks emerging and systems and controls changing, procedures and policies must be regularly reviewed and updated to ensure that they remain fit for purpose.

In order to support our members in developing and reviewing appropriate corporate governance frameworks, the HFMA has created a map of key corporate governance guidance. The HFMA's Covid-19 guidance map supplements this map, providing links to specific guidance available as a result of the pandemic

Aimed at NHS boards, governing bodies, audit committees and those NHS staff with an interest in governance, the purpose of the NHS corporate governance map is to highlight the published resources that support the development and maintenance of effective governance arrangements.

Whatever your level of expertise in this area, the map is a helpful tool with links to key documents all in one place.

The map is split into four sections:

- Strategic framework
- Enabling good governance
- Specific areas for assurance
- Devolved nations.

It signposts the model documents and guidance available, and when they were last updated. The map is not intended to be exhaustive but provides links to key references.

Much of the guidance will be of interest across the United Kingdom. However, guidance and tools specific to the devolved nations are included separately in section four.

The map will be updated periodically as new guidance is produced.

Strategic framework

The first section of the map focuses on the strategic framework within which NHS organisations operate. It includes reference to material to help organisations and officers understand the overall principles, responsibilities and vision for the NHS.

This context is important in establishing and maintaining good organisational governance arrangements that comply with the NHS constitution and national policies.

Operating within a climate of change and challenge, this section also covers the current national expectations for strategic planning and the guidance available.

It is clear that the national approach now reflects a move from competition to collaboration. As system working increases, existing governance frameworks and tools remain applicable.

However, specific guidance to support the changing ways of working are available. This section includes tools to help organisations develop their framework within existing structures that also support partnership working across the system.

Enabling good governance

This section focuses on guidance aimed at supporting those responsible for ensuring that good governance arrangements are in place. This includes codes of conduct and codes of governance that help organisations and individuals to understand the expectations placed on NHS professionals – both in terms of the role and the essential skills and qualities required.

This understanding supports the development of appropriate systems and processes to ensure good governance and encourages the required behaviours. The map reminds us of the importance of standards, such as ethical standards, and provides supporting links to codes and further guidance.

In particular, NHS boards, governing bodies and audit committees have a key role in ensuring that good governance arrangements are in place. The map highlights specific guidance and tools to support them with this essential role.

Specific areas for assurance

This section of the map looks at some specific areas that organisations need to assure themselves are covered by appropriate corporate governance arrangements.

An effective board assurance framework needs to be in place and the map provides links to principles and templates to consider when developing and updating it. It also provides links to relevant guidance and information, which are helpful in ensuring corporate governance safeguards are in place for specific areas such as: conflicts of interest; procurement; fraud; mergers and acquisitions; and information governance.

Transparency is a key feature of good corporate governance. NHS organisations are required to publish a number of key documents to ensure that the public is aware of the financial and governance arrangements in place. An organisation's published annual report includes the accounts and the annual governance report, and the map provides links to guidance to ensure that there is a clear understanding of what is required.

The Care Quality Commission as well as NHS England and NHS Improvement have assessment processes in place to review areas such as performance, quality, leadership and use of resources. The map includes links to documents that set out the assessment approaches.

Devolved nations

Much of the guidance will be of interest across the United Kingdom. However, with responsibility for health services devolved from Westminster to Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales, specific guidance for each of the devolved nations is also available.

This guidance may also be of interest to those working across the United Kingdom. This final section of the map therefore includes guidance and tools specific to the devolved nations.

About the HFMA

The Healthcare Financial Management Association (HFMA) is the professional body for finance staff working in healthcare. For 70 years it has provided independent support and guidance to its members and the wider healthcare community.

It is a charitable organisation that promotes the highest professional standards and innovation in financial management and governance across the UK health economy through its local and national networks. The association analyses and responds to national policy and aims to exert influence in shaping the healthcare agenda. It also works with other organisations with shared aims in order to promote financial management and governance approaches that really are 'fit for purpose' and effective.

The HFMA is the biggest provider of healthcare finance and business education and training in the UK. It offers a range of qualifications in healthcare business and finance at undergraduate and postgraduate level and can provide a route to an MBA in healthcare finance. The association is also an accredited provider of continuing professional development, delivered through a range of events, e-learning and training. In 2019 the HFMA was approved as a main training provider on the Register of Apprenticeship Training Providers and will be offering and developing a range of apprenticeships aimed at healthcare staff from 2020.
